

JABULANI'S REFLECTIONS

Being a learner under the trees wasn't an easy situation to deal with. However, our teachers were trying to teach without facilities like board, chalk, desk, or books. That condition thought me a lesson in life. I used to share it with my students in 7th grade as a class teacher telling them; you know "sometimes your current situation doesn't determine your future." Each and every 7th grade at the end of the year, I used to share my life experience with them trying to motivate and prepare them for secondary school.

Everything is possible in life; Yes

To be a teacher at a USA middle school was the best experience ever in my life. My students would ask about school environment, student's behavior, culture, and food we eat back home (in South Africa). Even teachers would ask about the South African teaching methods that we use and how it is different from USA methods. It was a wonderful experience indeed.
